The States which adopted this platform give electoral votes which can be relied on with absolute certainty in favor of the Democratic nomince, and well grounded confidence is entertained of a like result in Pennsylvania and of the entire electoral vote of the United States, able to elect the Democratic nominee against the combined opposition of all the remaining

This platform was deliberately rejected by a combination composed of a small fraction of the delegates from the se venteen Democratic States the action of the secoding delegates, who will Here is a pretty muss to begin the campaign and a very large majority of the delgates of the remaining sixteen States; and a resolution was adopted in its stead simply reaffirming the principies of the Cincinnati platform, without explanation or interpretation of its disputed meaning. This was done with the openly avowed purpose of enabling the Democratic party to wage battle with some chance of success in certain Northern and Western states by presenting to the people as its doctrines principles fornia or of Oregon to be heard in time? How openly and expessly repuliated by a majority are the constituencies of Texas and Virginia to of the Democratic State delegations, and by a meet in State Conventions and give authoritamajority approaching unanimity of the Democratic electoral votes of the Union.

The delegations of eight States, together with a portion of Delaware; faithful adherents of our direct attendance at Baltimore or Richmond in party and firm supporters of its principles, were accordance with their judgement? Evidently, firm supporters of its principles, were thus, by this cannot be done. Evidently, the delegasheer force of votes, cast by delegates from this cannot be done. Evidently, the delegation one of the most judicious papers in the Union, the Breath tions already elected are the only ones that can and perfectly free from party him cannot be done. States that will certainly vote for the Republiact, and they must act on their own judgement and perfectly free from party bias, says: can candidates, compelled to withdraw from the Convention, because, in the language of a distinguished delegate, they felt "that it was a burning imputation upon the honor and patriotism of the party, that claiming to be national, and should acknowledge for its declaration of faith a creed upon which are placed two distinctly opposite interpretations by its own advocates."

We cannot refrain from expressing our admiration and approval of this lofty manifestation of principle, rising superior to all considerations the success of a single struggle is unworthy of of concession and conciliation on less essential of expediency, to all trammels of party, and one moment's consideration, looking with a single eye to the defence of the constitutional rights of the States,

The delegations of other Democratic States. however, (including a few delegates from the Jefferson Davis, seceding States,) not less faithful in devotion to L. Q. C. Lamar, principles, were more hopeful of obtaining from Martin J. Crawford, their brethren some satisfactory recognition of Pater E Love, sound principles, and decided on remaining in the Convention after distinctly declaring, howeyes their determination also to withdraw if their just expectations should be disappointed.

It is thus apparent that there was almost unanimity of principle in the delegations of the only States on which absolute reliance can be placed for the Damocratic electoral votes, whiist there existed diversity of opinion as to the line of policy best calculated to secure the triumph that in a conjuncture so unexpected and anomalous, when, in the enunciation of Democratic principles, the voice of Virginia was overborne by that of Ohio, and Louisiana and Arkansas were forced to succumb to Vermont and Michigan, there should be excited feelings, divided counsels, and discordant action.

In the subsequent proceedings of the Convention, however we think that distinct intimations may be discerned of a disposition on the part of the Convention to recade from its determination, and to afford, either by an amendment of the platform or in some other manner equally satisfactory, and such recognition of principles as would effectually obviate misconstruction and secure the harmonious action of the party, and that it was only because of these intimations that the delegations of the remain-Demogratic States consented to join it the ballots which took place with no other effect than jority. Delegates are almost afraid to go back to induce the adjournment to Baltimore the 18th of June, whilst the seceding delegations Monday of the same month.

On this state of facts the path seems open for the united action of the party, and no insuperable obstacle opposes the restoration of its body except Bates, because Sewari can arouse the German excitement.
